

BOSTON MINISTERS CARRY BODS FOR DAY

Do Unskilled Labor on Construction Jobs to Get a 'Close-Up.'

SEVEN IN OVERALLS
Their Pulpits Are Offered in Exchange to Industrial Leaders.

PAID 55 CENTS AN HOUR

Surprised to See No Rugs or Mahogany Furniture at Union Headquarters.

Special Dispatch to THE NEW YORK HERALD.
BOSTON, Nov. 9.—"There's no mahogany furniture or nice rugs here; just plain furniture that has been used a long time."

That was the "first impression" of one of the seven ministers who accepted the invitation of the Boston Central Labor Union to-day and donned overalls and then carried bricks, sawed wood swept floors and did the work of an unskilled laborer on various construction jobs.

Next Sunday in many churches the subject "religious ideals in industrial relations" will be discussed, in some cases by representatives of organized labor. The public is invited to attend a meeting in Faneuil Hall Sunday afternoon.

Receive Union Permits.

Since the clergymen invited the labor leaders to fill their pulpits, labor decided to reciprocate and give to the ministers an opportunity to get a "close up" of labor by actual working with labor.

The clergymen went to the building trades headquarters prepared for work, with overalls under their arms. E. L. Johnson, secretary of the council, was on hand to greet them. And there were scores of other men in the building, who were out of work and waiting for something to turn up.

The ministers who were on the job were: The Rev. Arthur R. Stephenson of Australia, attending the Congressional International Conference here; the Rev. Newton C. Fetter, First Baptist Church; the Rev. Clarence A. Young, Roxbury Presbyterian Church; the Rev. Fletcher D. Parker, secretary of the City Missionary Society; the Rev. W. Harry Freda, Clarendon Street Baptist Church; the Rev. Frank Kingdon, Tremont Street Methodist Church, and the Rev. A. M. Smith.

Each received a special permit card by Secretary Johnson, which allowed them as non-union men to work with union men. They signed the cards. Then they were assigned to various jobs and taken to them in automobiles by agents of various unions.

Fetter and Young were taken by J. H. Fitzpatrick, agent of the Hoisting and Portable Engineers' local, to the new Latin school on Longwood avenue. On the way Fitzpatrick and the ministers exchanged views on bringing about a better understanding of labor.

"People condemn labor unions when they don't know anything about them or the conditions under which men work," said Fitzpatrick. "I am glad to see the ministers actually look into the labor conditions by taking off their coats and working with labor."

Miss Mahogany Furniture.

"I was surprised to see that there was no mahogany furniture or rugs on the floors at union headquarters," came from Mr. Fetter, with Pastor Young nodding assent. "It was the second time I had ever been in the headquarters of a labor union," Mr. Fetter added. "Seems to me it would be a good plan if the ministers were allowed to attend some of the labor meetings and hear the men talk over the terrible conditions under which they have to work," declared Fitzpatrick. "There are many men in town who have not worked for ten months. The other day I had to go twenty-five miles to get one man a job."

When the two ministers reached the building they asked the superintendent for any kind of work he thought they could do. They were put to work carrying a hod and pushing a wheelbarrow. Incidentally the hod carried by Mr. Young weighed seventy-two pounds in all and it was his work to take it up three flights of stairs.

Pastors Parker and Kingdon were assigned to a new building in Winter street. They were put to work sweeping, followed by other work.

The Rev. Mr. Smith was put on a construction job in Cornhill. Pastor Freda was assigned to similar work on State street and the Rev. Mr. Stephenson hauled cement for a firm on Windsor street.

The clergymen worked for a few hours and then collected fifty-five cents for every hour they were on the job. The money will be turned over to the fund for defraying expenses of the conference.

SAYS STATE CONTROLS ALL STREETS IN CITIES

Railway Lawyer Argues Before U. S. Supreme Court.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.—The argument on behalf of the street railways of Chicago in the case brought against them by the city of Chicago was presented in the Supreme Court to-day by H. P. Weber, who asserted that under the practice of the Supreme Court the case was closed on the decision of the State courts and should be dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

"It is not the doctrine of this court to review cases where questions dependent upon State constitution or statutes are at issue, but to accept in such cases as final the construction of the highest State court," Mr. Weber said.

Numerous precedents were cited which the railway's attorney said sustained the contention that the States have paramount control over the streets in municipalities, can regulate or take away that power from the cities. He asserted that in this case the State had never conferred upon Chicago the power to contract with the street railways for any period of years, and had not in any way suspended its power of police regulation to control in all matters, including fares.
